BUDDHIST SPIRITUAL PRACTICE ON THE SACRED FEMININE

with Elizabeth Mattis Namgyel

A teaching on the Prajnaparamita, the Perfection of Transcendent Wisdom. The Divine Feminine in a fundamental or essential way refers to insight or wisdom. Prajna means accurate seeing and Paramita means to go beyond or transcend our ordinary way of seeing things.

Elizabeth Mattis Namgyel is a Buddhist teacher, author, and practitioner who has studied and practiced the Buddhadharma for 30 years under the guidance of Dzigan Kongtrul Rinpoche. Elizabeth says, “these emptiness teachings are very powerful and transformative for our time, yet they are often overlooked or misunderstood... They have changed my whole life.”

“Gate, Gate, Paragate, Parasamgate, Bodhi Svaha!”

*“Gone, gone, gone all the way over, everyone gone to the other shore.
Enlightenment!”*

(The Heart Sutra’s closing Sankrit mantra as translated by Thich Nhat Han)

ONE, NOT TWO: SACRED WHOLENESS

Pravrajika Brahma-prana, Christopher Pramuk, Elizabeth Mattis Namgyel, and Lyla June Johnston

From ancient times our faith traditions teach us that everything is inextricably united as a sacred whole. This eternal and perennial wisdom is hard to grasp by the human mind, which tends to see the world dualistically: right/wrong, male/female, sacred/profane. The contemplative, non-dual mind, however, can restore our understanding of the interdependence of all things. It holds paradox, and it is unitive.

This session will explore how unifying, and balancing the complementary feminine and masculine aspects of Divine Wisdom is essential to our approaching wholeness, and the non-dual mind.

2 - 4 pm CONFRONTING GENDER: SEEING, HEARING & VALUING THE FEMININE
Nina Simons, Rev. Monica Coleman, and others

We face many grave spiritual and cultural imbalances caused by our devaluing, oppression, and ignorance of the feminine. Discrimination, bias, and assault based on gender/identification is a global and systemic condition. Yet as evidenced by #metoo, #TimesUp, the women's march, and prominent media stories from Hollywood to New York City, women's voices are being heard around the globe, and with them, political will is building to confront gender bias.

Understanding, lifting up, and integrating the feminine may result in a new understanding and re-spiritualization of how we look at the world and ourselves. How can we more fully reconnect and restore feminine wisdom to our collective and cultural consciousness as a fundamental way to heal our wounds? How would the world look with a realignment of values, and the reinfusion of the feminine?

INDIGENOUS SPIRITUAL PRACTICE ON THE SACRED FEMININE

with Pat McCabe (Weyakpa Najin Win)

A teaching on the role of the feminine in Indigenous practices of spirituality, and in relationship to community. Indigenous Peoples' "Ways of Knowing," how they understand and heal their disrupted ways of living will have everything to do with the solutions we are all seeking as a global community.

Weyakpa Najin Win (Woman Stands Shining) is a Diné (Navajo) mother, grandmother, activist, artist, writer, ceremonial leader, and international speaker. She believes that "what we are suffering from at this time on the planet is a crisis of relationship."

Honor the Sacred. Honor the Earth, our Mother. Honor the Elders. Honor all with whom we share the Earth: Four-leggeds, two-leggeds, winged ones. Swimmers, crawlers, plant and rock people. Walk in balance and beauty. - Native American Elder

DARK NIGHTS OF THE SOUL

Rev. Ruby Sales, Rev. Monica Coleman, Kenza Isnasni, and more

World religions teach us that suffering is part of the human condition. Our attempts to avoid suffering prevent us from experiencing essential insights and awareness that lead to spiritual healing and growth. Individually and collectively, we must step into the shadows, sit with our fears, and embrace vulnerability.

Spiritual teachings and practices help us transform the darkness into light, the fallow to the fertile, and awaken a deep level of awareness and accountability. Through these teachings, can we come to confront our shortcomings and broken behaviors? How can we face America's most egregious acts, including genocide and slavery? How can feminine insight hold space for the darkness so that we can be transformed?

"People are like stained-glass windows. They sparkle and shine when the sun is out, but when the darkness sets in, their true beauty is revealed only if there is a light from within." - Elizabeth Kübler-Ross

2 - 4 pm     CULTURE OF ADDICTION
Rev. Ruby Sales, Lynne Twist, and Rev. Becca Stevens

We live in a culture of addiction. Many of us feel increasingly alienated, and disconnected as we try to find meaning, and fulfillment, through the accumulation of “more.” This pursuit leads to further fracture, and the destructive cycle continues. We are addicted to our ego, money, power, drugs, and “stuff.” In a world that has evolved to feed and profit from human suffering, how do we break the cycle, and find happiness, contentment, and peace?

In this session, healers will show how accessing feminine wisdom today can help us accept our deepest wounds, and provide insight, and forgiveness, that leads to healing. Additionally, speakers will help us understand our cultural addictions to materialism, and success, and illuminate the spiritual, and human, costs associated with these systems.

HINDU SPIRITUAL PRACTICE ON THE SACRED FEMININE

with Pravrajika Brahma-prana

A guided meditation on the “Light of Loving Consciousness.” Rooted in the Vedanta Hindu tradition, this meditation is on the Divine Feminine in Her impersonal aspect chit, the light of consciousness, which is the same as ananda, loving consciousness.

A meditation aimed at centering ourselves more deeply in a particular mood of the Divine Feminine, by either choosing a symbol (such as Kali, Durga, Laksmi, Radha, Sita, or Mother Mary); an attribute (such as compassion, forbearance, or unconditional love); shakti, (Primal Energy, the power of Brahman, God); or her Divine Presence.

Pravrajika Brahma-prana is the resident minister at the Ramakrishna Vedanta Society of North Texas. She has been a Hindu nun since 1973.

10 am

MOTHER: EARTH

- 12 pm

Lynne Twist, Rabbi Nina Cardin, and Pat McCabe

The Earth is our most profound teacher. Most spiritual traditions refer to the Earth in the feminine. She is the source of all life. Through her complex systems she models essential lessons such as interdependence, interconnection, mutuality, mystery, and wholeness. Her seasons are cycles of birth, death, and rebirth. Our relationship to the Earth is an access point for uncovering feminine wisdom and insight.

What we do to the Earth is a mirror of what we also do to the feminine aspects of ourselves. She has been objectified, dominated, tamed, brutalized, and neglected. This session will reveal how the wisdom of the natural world manifests itself, and how to use this wisdom as a teacher, guide, and healer to restore balance in our relationships with the Earth and each other.

MODELING WHOLENESS: PEOPLE, PLACE, AND PLANET

Mary Berry, Rabbi Nina Cardin, Kenza Isnasni, and more

Mass displacement of people, violence, war, and natural disasters are symptoms of our current relationship to the Earth. When we respect and value the interconnections among people, place, and planet, we are honoring the inextricable sacred web of all things. We are also honoring Feminine wisdom and the understanding that sustainable solutions address people, place, and planet together as one, complex, sacred system.

This session will explore best practices and holistic approaches to restoring and renewing bonds between people and the places where they live. It will emphasize the feminine principles of interconnection, community, and care as models of wholeness.

HONOR! FEMININE WISDOM

The Louisville Story Program and a conversation with Diane Rehm

Since June 2017, nine students from Iroquois High School have been working with the Louisville Story Program to write a book. Collectively, the authors speak nine languages and have lived in seven countries. They are writing about the ravages of war, life before and after moving to Louisville as refugees and immigrants, the foster care system, juvenile detention, motherhood, and many other challenges and triumphs. Nine powerful young women will share excerpts from their stories.

Beloved former public radio host, Diane Rehm, will speak about growing up as an Arab American, her ascent to preeminence in the male-dominated world of journalism, her nearly career-ending illness, and the loss of her beloved husband. She will share the essential insights gained throughout her career interviewing powerful and accomplished individuals, as well as wisdom that sustained her through the “dark nights” of her own illness, and that of her husband.

How do we honor and integrate the Feminine aspects of Divine Wisdom in ourselves? Hear from spiritual voices deeply rooted in their sacred traditions about the essence of love and Feminine wisdom.

The Sacred Feminine manifests itself in a variety of forms in the world's great faith traditions, including Sakinah, Guanyin, Sophia, Shakti, Kali, The Great Spirit, Chochmah, Yin/Yang, and many others. INTEGRATING THE FEMININE ASPECTS OF THE DIVINE

Sharon Salzberg, Najah Bazy, Schuyler Brown, and others

How can insight gained using feminine wisdom be incorporated into our lives? In the current socio-political climate, how can we shift the worldview to create a new spiritually grounded narrative, and based on a balance of the masculine and feminine? Speakers will explore practical approaches to restoring health, and harmony, in our modern society through the integration of Feminine Insight and Wisdom.

The panel will be followed by a series of short interfaith reflections. Festival speakers will offer spiritual tools and insights for engaging Feminine Wisdom in the world.

The session will conclude with a short dialogue with the Festival of Faiths hosts and special guests to suggest approaches towards synthesizing the week's major themes.
